Renowned futurist, Ervin Laszlo, is a philosopher of science and integral theorist who founded systems philosophy and general evolution theory, has an impressive resume: nominated twice for the Nobel Peace Prize, nominated for the Templeton Prize, author or editor of 75 books translated into 20 languages, author of over 400 papers, editor of World Futures: The Journal of General Evolution, and past president of the International Society for the Systems Sciences. For decades, Laszlo's work has taken him to the cutting edge of science and consciousness by revealing the human connection to the cosmos. In his "Science and the Reenchantment of the Cosmos", he discloses the ramifications of non-localized consciousness and how the physical world and spiritual experience are two aspects of the same reality. Laszlo bridges the divide between science and spirituality, heralding the inter-connectedness of all aspects of the future. An internationally renowned group of visionaries and scientists have contributed to Laszlo's book including Jane Goodall, former astronaut Ed Mitchell, Stanislav Grof, Ralph Abraham, Christian de Quincey and more great thinkers of our time. These contributors have explored the sense of sacred oneness experienced by our ancestors which has been displaced by the unyielding material presumptions of modern science. Together, they and Laszlo reveal how this sacred and integrated vision of reality can be restored, enabling humanity to once again feel at home in the universe. [Read more]
